Jordan: King Husayn reportedly plans changes in the government, possibly including the removal of Prime Minister Rifai.

Husayn, generally disturbed at the cabinet's failure to face up to the country's major problems, is extremely displeased with the government's docile handling of the fedayeen. [REDACTED]

25X1

[REDACTED] the King plans to insist that Rifai make some changes in the cabinet, including the removal of the minister of interior. The latter will probably be replaced with Muhammad Rasul Kaylani, the director of public security and one of Husayn's most trusted aides. If Rifai refuses to make the changes, he will be dismissed.

The King [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] reportedly feels that the accumulation of unsolved problems cannot continue to be ignored and that he will be forced to make some tough and unpopular decisions. A cabinet reshuffle, however, will do little to solve the basic problems facing him, especially the continuing difficulty of fedayeen presence and activity in Jordan. [REDACTED]
